PROPERTY PURCHASE BY TOWNSHIP OF TERRACE BAY

FROM: Township of Terrace Bay

TERRACE BAY, ON – Mayor and Council of the Township of Terrace Bay are proud to announce the purchase of a substantial amount of land in our community by the municipality. Over the past two years council, administration and legal counsel have been working hard to secure key pieces of land that we believe are vital to the continued success of our Township. We learned earlier this year that our offer had been accepted through the court monitored process and today the purchase has been officially completed. We have secured approximately 1,085 acres of property formerly owned by Terrace Bay Pulp Inc. that includes the Aguasabon Golf Course, Terrace Bay Airport, as well as a portion of vacant land that includes a significant amount of waterfront.

Township of Terrace Bay Mayor Jody Davis said "We are very excited about the completion of the purchase of this land. The golf course, airport, beaches and other property is crucial to the community's success and ability to grow in the future. We feel this purchase enables the Township to explore future development opportunities including waterfront development. We look forward to working with Parks Canada (Lake Superior National Marine Conservation Area), Ontario Parks (the Slate Islands Provincial Park) and the Thunder Bay Field Naturalists in the development of partnership opportunities."

Mr. Jon Hall, Chief Administrative Officer for the Township of Terrace Bay "This process began under the former CAO and I think his efforts combined with those of the current management team over the past year should be celebrated. Township administration has worked a very long time on this property purchase and the announcement today is definitely good news for the community."

ROSSPORT - COASTAL TRAIL OPENS

ROSSPORT, ON – July 19th the Rossport Tourism Association held the Grand Opening of the Rossport Coastal Trail with the unveiling of new signage for the project made possible by a Local Initiatives Contribution from the Superior North CFDC [LIC funded by FedNor/Gov't Canada].

The 1.5 km trail is easy to find and follows along the shore of Lake Superior from Wardrope Park (East end of Rossport) to the Rossport Roadside Park. All levels of hikers will enjoy the trail which provides many photographic opportunities with beautiful views of Lake Superior, beaches and some of the islands of the Rossport archipelago.

"We've worked very hard to get to this point" said Rossport Tourism Association member Beverley Turpin. The Rossport Tourism Association hopes to see the trail used not only by tourists but also by their regional neighbours across Northwestern Ontario.

PIC RIVER ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR HYDROELECTRIC PROJECT WITHIN PUKASKWA NATIONAL PARK

PIC RIVER FIRST NATION, ON - The Ojibway of the Pic River First Nation announced July 16, they expect full support from Pukaskwa National Park in regards to their submission of a proposal to the federal government for a 25-30 MW generating station at Chigamiwinigum Falls.

"We believe that projects like the Chigamiwinigum Falls project are consistent with the Park mandate, and in particular, with the mandate of Pukaskwa Park as a prime example of Canada's boreal forests. Hydro electric development and the retention of the forest ecology values are completely compatible objectives." said Chief Duncan Michano

Chief Michano explained that not having signed the Robinson Superior Treaty, Pic River First Nation is continuing to assert their Aboriginal title to traditional territory of the Begetikong Anishnabe.

The project, explained PRFN Director of Energy Project Development Byron LeClair, could produce enough power for the annual needs of 12,500 homes and would be Pic River's largest project to date with a cost in excess of 100M.

Parks Canada is not new to hosting hydro electric facilities with others at Trent Severn National Park and Banff National Park.

MAJOR MISCONCEPTIONS REGARDING EXCHANGE-TRADED FUNDS BY KIM INGLIS

Research and consultancy firm ETFGI reports that globally listed assets of ETFs and exchange-traded products reached a new record high of US$2.55 trillion at the end of May 2014. Canada represents US$63.2 billion of those assets. This remarkable growth has also brought changes.

ETFs started out quite broad-based. However, an influx of specialty products has helped grow their number, with many having smaller assets under management and lower trading volumes. According to BMO Financial Group, 134 ETFs in Canada have assets of $30 million or less, and 191 are trading fewer than 10,000 shares per day.

This has led to a major misconception. Many investors believe that an ETF's daily trading volume indicates its liquidity because small volumes could create difficulties getting in and out of positions. However, ETF trading volumes have a negligible effect on liquidity.

ETFs have three levels of liquidity. The first, and natural, level occurs on the stock market exchange where buyers and sellers match up. The second is through the activity of designated brokers who are responsible for ensuring an orderly market. The third level of liquidity involves underwriters who create or redeem ETF units either offsetting increased demand or tightening supply if demand falls. The true liquidity of an ETF is linked to that of the underlying securities, not the volume.

The BMO S&P/TSX Equal Weight Banks Index ETF (ZEB) is a good example. Its underlying holdings are the six major Canadian banks. Although the ETF often trades as little as 20,000 shares in a day, the banks regularly trade in the millions. Since the daily trading volume of the banks is so large, significant trade orders can be placed for the ETF without impacting its price.

Granted, not all ETFs are liquid and a quick way of assessing an ETF's liquidity is to check the difference between its buying and selling prices. A large spread between the bid and ask generally indicates that its underlying securities may be less liquid. ETFs are required to publish all of their holdings on a daily basis which means investors can look up the individual securities and assess their liquidity.

Regardless of liquidity, ETF investors should follow some simple rules. As with equity trading, it's always prudent to use limit orders on ETF trades. These allow investors to set limits on the prices at which they are willing to buy or sell, affecting profitability.

Those trading in international, commodity, or currency ETFs should make certain the underlying markets are open. If trades are made when the underlying market is closed, investors risk buying or selling at pricing that is at variance with the ETF's net asset value (NAV).

Investors should avoid trading ETFs at either the open or close of the market. An ETF's price depends on the value of its underlying holdings and it can take a few minutes after market open for the underlying securities to start trading. Investors buying ETFs on market open risk purchasing the ETF before the price changes in the underlying securities have been reflected in its price. Similarly, movement in the underlying portfolio can be volatile near the close and pricing may not be accurate.

THE MOUNTAINS OF MANITOUWADGE BY EDGAR J. LAVOIE

By Edgar J. Lavoie

"I love it when a plan comes together."

Remember that line from Mission: Impossible? The TV action series ran from 1966 to 1973, and the character Jim Phelps usually closed each episode by uttering that line.

Things came together for me and my siblings last week. We met up in Manitouwadge, where John lives. Grace came from Collingwood, Susanne from Thunder Bay, and I from Greenstone. It was the first time in over fifty years that we four had hung out together without the presence of our respective families and/or friends. It was grand.

Over the three days, Grace explored new territory, Susanne rediscovered old territory, and John and I (for two days) ran around the bush (more on that later). During the evenings and in the mornings, we recounted our adventures to one another.

On Thursday, while John guided two naturalists to a secret place dancing with a rare species of orchid, Susanne and I climbed a mountain. Grace begged off, said her metal knees forbade it. She went swimming or something.

Manitouwadge is surrounded by mountains. Not your Canadian Rockies-style of mountains, but very big hills nevertheless. Locals frequently climb Manitouwadge Mountain to get a splendid view of the town, and the landscape that stretches for miles and miles towards the Great Lake Superior.

Susanne and I got directions, parked at the base of the Mountain, and took to the steep, twisty trail. We emerged in a clearing described by John as "the bald spot" and, low down and behold! [Continued...]
